

2008 Guide of the Year! Jason Wright

A Michigan native, Jason Wright came to Wyoming each summer to pursue a career in the outdoor industry when he was sixteen years old. Jason graduated from Eastern Michigan University with a Bachelor of Science. He received his college degree in teaching in 1990 and then returned to Wyoming to start his career as a professional guide.

As a professional guide, Jason uses his talents year round. When the green is just sprouting up, he is spring bear hunting with clients hunting for that color phase bear. In the summer, you will find him guiding fishing and scenic float trips on the Snake River and the Grand Teton National Park. In 1992, Jason was chosen by the Secret Service to guide President Ronald Reagan and his family on a scenic float trip in Grand Teton National Park. The winter months he is in Yellowstone guiding snowmobile tours. When the snow starts flying in the fall he is working for Barlow Outfitting. Jason has spent the last twenty years exploring the Teton, Gros Ventre, and the Jedidiah Smith wilderness. He has a way of sniffing out those Big Bulls and calling them right into your lap. Jason has won many awards with WYOGA for the top guided moose in the state of Wyoming. He is getting quite famous around the western part of Wyoming as a great professional guide.

Jason enjoys his work and being outdoors, but also enjoys time with his family and friends. When Jason is not at work, he enjoys being guided himself. Hunting and fishing in Mexico and fly fishing for bone fish in the Bahamas. He pretends to enjoy the near death experiences of rock climbing thanks to his wife Robyn. His daughter Halle would say he enjoys taking over the couch along with the remote control!!

Jason's love of the outdoors brought him to Wyoming. His sense of humor is FIRST CLASS! Jason is just a great person to be with and is always very professional.
